

Statement of the MIME Advisory Board to the Final Project Meeting “Interdisciplinarity and the future of multilingualism research”
Berlin, 28-29 August 2018
Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin

Having followed the development of the project Mobility and Inclusion in Multilingual Europe (MIME) from its start in 2014, The MIME Advisory Board, expresses its appreciation of the scientifically innovative and exceptionally multidisciplinary character of this project and commends its rich outcomes and output.

MIME has produced scientific outcomes, which are also highly socially relevant. It offers innovative theoretical, methodological and empirical approaches that stand in their own right. In our view, the publications from this project fully meet high quality standards for the scientific output of a project of this kind and size.

In light of these achievements, we express the hope that scholars involved in the project will be offered the opportunity to continue this fruitful work in the future, with the aim of furthering the innovative potential that addresses the opportunities and challenges stemming from integration and mobility in today's Europe.

In name of the MIME Advisory Board

Tom Moring
Professor of Communication and Journalism (Emeritus)
University of Helsinki
Chair of the MIME advisory Board